THOUSANDS SEE AVIATOR KILLED

Plunges 2000 Feet to His Death from a Filght in the Clouds.

Pueblo, Colo., Sept. 15.—Weldon B. Cooke, a professional aviator, was killed in a plunge of 2000 feet in his biplane while giving an exhibition flight over the state fair grounds here today.

Thousands saw the machine suddenly halt in mid air and then drop like a plummet to the earth below. Cooke was crushed under the air craft.

Probably Struck "Air Pocket."
As nearly as can be ascertained, the accident was caused by an "air pocket." There seemed to be nothing the trouble with the engine and it was running when the biplane struck the ground.

Cooke had made a spectacular flight, rising to fully 2000 feet above the fair grounds and circling about for ten minutes.

Those watching the flight saw the machine suddenly swerve to the left as though the aviator intended to make a descent. Then, in a twinkling, the aeroplane turned head to the earth and dashed almost straight downward.

Spectators Grown At Crowd.
A crowd went up from the spectators who realized that something had gone wrong and when the air craft struck just outside the fair grounds with a grinding crash it was evident that only a miracle could have saved Cooke.

His body was badly crushed under the wreckage, and although ambulances and doctors were hurriedly summoned it was apparent the aviator had been killed instantly.
